

This winter, more families can receive assistance with Washington Gas bills.

If you need heat in the DC region, help is here.

A new program creates even more opportunities for assistance with heating bills through the Washington Area Fuel Fund (WAFF) beginning January 2.

What is the Merger Funds Program?

Through Washington Gas' merger with AltaGas, more low- and moderate-income customers now may receive support from WAFF, which helps with your winter heating bills if you live in Maryland, D.C., or Virginia. Contact your local Salvation Army office.

Eligibility requirements for the Merger Funds Program

- You must reside in the Washington Gas service territory and be a customer.
- Meet income eligibility guidelines (e.g., family of four earning $75,050 could receive assistance).
- You have a disconnection notice, or had service disconnected.

Traditional assistance is still available.

Families who are not Washington Gas customers (but live in the Washington Gas service territory) are still eligible to receive WAFF assistance through your local Salvation Army office.

Get more information about receiving WAFF assistance at www.waffhelp.org